Biographical Note

Dr. James J. Fyfe was a nationally recognized expert on the use of force by the police, had a long and distinguished career in law enforcement with the New York Police Department, and was a respected author and influential scholar in criminal justice.

He is probably best known for his research on deadly force, police officer conduct and emphasizing the need for redirection in the training of police and the rules and procedures that police departments follow. His services as a consultant or expert witness for the prosecution or defense in high-profile criminal trials was much in demand. Some of the notable cases in which he testified or acted as a consultant were: Tennessee v. Garner et al. (471 U.S. 1), a Supreme Court case which forbade officers from shooting people fleeing from crime scenes; the Jeffrey Daumer serial murderer case (785 F. Supp. 1343), the Rodney King case in Los Angeles (833 F. Supp. 769), and the Amadou Diallo case (261 A.D. 2d) in New York City. In speaking about Fyfe and the police practice of shooting fleeing crime suspects Fyfe’s widow, Dr. Candace McCoy stated: "He proved that it was wrong, both morally and practically. It served no law enforcement purpose; that was revolutionary, and the Supreme Court of the United States agreed with him" (Baker, 2005).

Other areas of focus in his research were how police officers use their guns when off duty, and how on-duty plainclothes officers should identify themselves when responding to reports of crimes in progress. In 2000 Michael Julian, former Chief of Personnel at NYPD remarked: “Jimmy is reviled and feared and revered in police circles. But he has done more to change policing than anyone else in this country” (Hoffman, 2000).

James Fyfe was born in the Bay Ridge neighborhood of Brooklyn on Feb. 16, 1942. He graduated from Fort Hamilton High School and joined the NYPD in 1963, working as a patrolman in many of New York City’s precincts. As a police officer, sergeant and lieutenant he earned seven citations from NYPD and was the first chairman of the Police Academy’s Police Science Department and a commander of the Management Training Unit. He pursued academic study, earning his bachelor’s degree from John Jay College of Criminal Justice in 1971, and a Master’s degree in 1972 from the State University of New York at Albany. He retired as a lieutenant from the NYPD after obtaining a Ph.D in criminal justice, also from SUNY at Albany, in 1979. He then spent more than two decades in academic posts at American University, Temple University and John Jay College of Criminal Justice, teaching, researching and writing about police practices and policies, particularly in the use of deadly force. In 2002 Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly chose Fyfe to be the NYPD’s Deputy Commissioner for Training, a top-level position which he held until his death in 2005. “Dr. Fyfe was unique in going from the practical, as a police officer, to the theoretical and back again” said Jerome H. Skolnick, a New York University law professor who is an expert on police practices and a co-author with Dr. Fyfe of "Above the Law: Police and the Excessive Use of Force" (Free Press, 1993) (Baker, 2005)

Among his honors is the American Society of Criminology's 2002 August Vollmer Award, given to a scholar whose work has influenced criminal justice practice. At his death, Dr. Fyfe was on leave as a distinguished professor at John Jay College. "His research on the use of force changed the direction of police practice and legal doctrine," said Jeremy Travis, president of the college (Baker, 2005).

James Fyfe was married twice; his first marriage to Carol Roinos Fyfe ended in divorce. He was married to Dr. Candace McCoy for 18 years. He had two daughters from his first marriage, Laura Fyfe Seri and Jill Fyfe McGrath, a daughter from his second marriage, Gwen Fyfe, and three grandchildren. He died in Princeton, NJ at the age of 63 on November 12, 2005 after being treated for cancer for more than a year.
